The first rain will replenish the extensive cisterns at the barracks and fort, and then the only article needed will be supplied to the garrison. The rainy season may now be daily looked for, but should the supply be withheld for six months the troops would not suffer. THE STEAM TRANSPORTS.

THE BALTIC AND ILLINOIS SEEN AT SEA-TWO STEAMTUGS SEEN-STATEMENT OF CAPT. CROWELL, OF THE STEAMSHIP PLORIDA, ETC.

The steamship Florida, from Savannah, arrived at this port on Wednesday morning. Captain Crowell states that on Tuesday afternoon, about four o'clock, they passed the steam transports Baltic and Blinois, bound south, off Absecom, which is distant about ninety miles from New York harbor. A heavy sea was rolling from the eastward No soldiers were to be seen on the decks, and it is probable that they were then undergoing the terrors of sea sickness. The steamers were distant about four or five miles from the Florida when discerned. The Baltic had no sail on, though the wind was favorable, and might have been taken advantage of. The Illinois, however, seemed to appreciate the opportunity offered for increasing her speed, and at the time the Florida passed was hoisting her jib and foresail.

Captain Crowell also reports having passed, at half past eight o'clock on Monday morning, two steamtugs off Hatteras shoals, distant about 350 miles from New York. Both of them were bound south. One of them had two shoulder of mutton sails set; the other had two masts

BROOKLYN NAVY YARD. There was a very large influx of visiters to the Navy Yard yesterday, drawn thither by the fine summery weather and the expectation of witnessing something extraordinary. In this latter expectation the greater num ber were disappointed, for there was nothing extraordimary to be seen. A few of the visitors, however, ap-

pered to be from the country, and some of them probably more saw a line of pattle ship before in their lives. To such the walk to the Navy Yard was a treat, and, doub less, the place had an air of activity not so percept to these who are more familiar therewith, and on their return they will have a great dea those whom they have left of the wonders they have witnessed—the North Carolins and her big guns; the little Perry, with two masts, and Wabash and Roanoke, with no masts at all Among the visiters yesterday there were an unusual number of ladies, who could walk about the yard and view everything of interest without shivering in the raw, bleak wind that had been blowing for some days past, or being enveloped in clouds of dust, to the destruc tion of their dresses and the filling of eyes, nose an mouth with the almost impalpable particles.

The work on the several vessels is progressing. Perry has nearly all her rigging complete, and the work men were engaged yesterday reeving the ratines to the shrouds. The huge derrick had completed its task of hoisting the water tanks on board the Wabash; but its services will be soon called into requisition again to hoist n the masts, which were being placed alongside for that purpose. The engines of this vessel are nearly completed and it is understood that Chief Engineer King is making such alterations and improvements on them as will add materially to their efficiency. In a few days time they will be taken in. Nothing is being done to the engines of the Roanoke, and there remains considerable work yet to be done to the upper part of her hull and her interior before she can be fitted, out as a seagoing vessel.

The work is going on with considerable speed on board the Savannah, but as it is all inside, what has been accomplished is not apparent to the visiter. There can now be but little doubt that the Wabasi the Savannah and the Perry are preparing for sea, and that the latter may be placed in commission at any mo-ment; but the officers, like the old boatman of the river Styx, who would not take passengers across free if he could, and couldn't if he would, either cannot or will not give any information on the subject. It is only by "puting that and that together"-to employ a vulgarismthat an outsider can arrive at a tolerably correct conclu

Among the things worthy of notice are a number of dahlgren guns, of heavy calibre, that are being painted in glaring red, and rendered quite smart in appearancea circumstance trivial, considered separately, but which secomes invested with significance when taken in cor nection with the other unmistakeable signs of war preparation. Alongside the wharf where the Perry is lying was a lighter, from which a large quantity of provision were being landed, and a number of bands were engaged housing the barrels.

THE DEPARTURE OF THE STEAM FRIGATE PAWNEE.

OUR NAVAL CORRESPONDENCE.

United States Steam Sloop Pawner, Off Cape Henry, April 10, 1861. The Pawnee left the Navy Yard at Washington, D. C. at nine A. M. April 6, and steamed directly for Norfolk arriving off the Naval Hospital at half-past seven A. M on the 7th. Coal and provisions were put on board, but the inclemency of the weather prevented her putting to sea till this morning. She sails under sealed orders therefore her destination will not be known till after all communication with the shore is cut off. The officers have no clue whatever as to her destination. No unusua preparations have been made for warlike purposes, or for any purpose aside from the usual routine of a man-of-war. It is sincerely hoped by all bands that coercive measures are not contemplated by the government. It is too late. Revolution has become a success. Civil war would only inaugurate a useless bloody struggle. The present ad ministration can hardly be held to blame for the present state of affairs, as everything was accomplished before

In passing down the Potomac river and arriving oppo-site Mount Vernon, a beautiful and graceful tribute was paid to the sacred remains that He entombed in that hal-lowed spot. All hands were called, efficers in swords and the Pawnee drawn up, with belt and musket at a given signal the large American ensign fell at half mast; the ship's bell toiled out its muffied tones, the melaucholy drums rolled their funereal salute, while the presented arms and uncovered heads of officers and men paid a sad tribute of respect to him who was "first in war, first in peace and first in the hearts of his countrymen;" and so the Pawnee passed on silent and mourning, for he by whose grave she glided was the Father of his country—a country dearedly a life time old; yet the children of the second generation are ready to tear it to pieces, and with its ruins hide forever from the eye of men that grave and all the deeds which make it so famous in the world. Pass by this grave, oh Americans, as did the Pawnee and her gallant crew, and if after you have the hearts to rend each other, to scatter ashes and ruin over the land of Washington, then, indeed, is vain all virtue, all patietism, and the sconer the iron heel of despotism is planted firmly upon the neck of the people the better. Let both North and South remember the cry, "fhose that rule by the sword shall perish by the sword."

The Pawnee goes upon her duty. She will, under the direction of her gallant commander and officers, perform it faithfully, no matter how painful it may be—no matter how many friendships may be broken—no matter how much we may differ about the right or wrong of it. ship's bell tolled out its muffled tones, the melaucholy

No orders for the disposition of the troops that arrived yesterday from Texas, had been received by Lieu tenant Woods up to a late hour yesterday afternoon, and the troops are still on the vessel,

There is one very noticeable feature on the Island during the past week, and that is the increase of the number of visiters. The little boat that runs between the island and the Battery has been kept very busy. Many of these persons are drawn there merely from curiesity, others of course go to see friends and relatives. Yesterday there was quite a number on the island.

THE RECRUITING OFFICES are still receiving applications for enlistment in the army and navy. At the office in Chatham street seven mer were yesterday received, and the other offices are doing a proportionate business.

GOVERNOR HICKS AND THE PRESIDENT'S POLICY.

WASHINGTON, April 11, 1861.

Governor Hicks, of Maryland, has been in consultation with the President for several hours to-day. He came here with feelings of regret at the course the administration was taking in its seeming coercive policy; but when the Governor heard the reasons for the present course of the President and his advisors, and understood the record by which they had been guided, he modified his opinion to a very great extent. The govern-ment claims that it is not coercing any State or community. It is endeavoring to protect the property of the United States; and, if I am not very much property of the United States; and, if I am not very much mistaken in what I see and hear, the government will do it at all hazards and at whatever cost. There is a stendy, cool and deliberate intention to show the world one of two things—either that we have a government worth preserving, or that it is so imbecile that a few slave-holders on this continent can set themselves up as superior to it and more powerful.

When the facts upon which the administration has acted in this emergency are all known to the people of this country, not one in ten will withhold his support from he government.

MR. BARNEY FROM HOME.

The Applicants Disappointed-Another Strange Kind of Office Seeker-The New Deputy Collector Sworn In-A Very Curious but Ineffective Document-The Strangers in the Galleries, &c.

As announced in our afternoon edition of yesterday, Mr. Barney left this city for Washington on the evening of Wednesday. It was expected that he would do so or Wednesday afternoon, as, in consequence of wanting time o prepare for his journey, he had discontinued receiving time he had previously announced he would do so-Great, therefore, was the disappointment of many when they found the Collector was not in town yesterday. One applicant visited the Custom House as early as a quarter before eight o'clock in the morning, and, fancying he was being heaxed by those who told him of the absence of the Collector, staid about the building till the regular business of the department commenced. He then left with the determination to be present again in the after noon, and at half-past two o'clock P. M. he made his re

Applications were handed to the doorkeeper or presented personally to the Collector's Secretary during the whole day. Those who would not give their document to the doorkeeper were recommended to keep them until the Collector returned. Other persons, however, recommended the applicants to take these papers down to the mended the applicants to take these papers down to the bagement and hand them to the Secretary or the newly elected Deputy Collector, both of whom would doubtless be found there. For the information of those who may not be conversant with the underground arrangements of the Custom House, we will state that the Secretary in question is to be found in the Invoice Department, which is located under the rotunda. The entrance from Wall street is by a door leading from a railed passage way on the west side of the editice, the door facing on Nassau street. Entering this door, the visiter tinds himself among the massive pillars which support the main building, and proceeding along the left head wall he will soon reach the desired spot. Should the applicant enter the building from Pine street he will have to descend the stairs on either side of the hallway, and entering a doorway near the foot of the steps, he will find himself in the room with the pillars before described. On the right of this doorway he will see the words 'Invoice Department'' over the door of the room he seeks. He must not be frightened to see the gentlemen who fill the offices of Private Secretary and Deputy Collector, assisted by several clerks, busily engaged in reading and filing away the previously received applications. The work is a heavy one, and requires time and privacy. Therefore we recommend the applicants not to delay those gentlemen longer than ne cessary while giving in their papers; that is, if they wish their applications to be effective.

Among those who applied to see the Collector yester day was one who was deaf and dumb. It appears that he wished to present his papers to the Collector himself, and as he is backed up by several influential gentlemen, he is expected to be successful. It was suggested that he should be placed at one of the entry desks, as it would matter little then how a merchaut might grumble about the tariff, or what objections he might make: the clerk could not hear him.

Mr. J. H. Steadwell was yesterday formal pasement and hand them to the Secretary or the newly

The italicised words are filled in by the pen.

A poor applicant yesterday seemed to be the victim of a cruel joke. He presented, so he said, a document of recommendatin to an office. When the envelope was opened the document turned out to be a printed copy of a "speech of Hen. J. P. Benjamin, of Louisiana, on the constitutional rights of the States, delivered in the Senate of the United States, May 22, 1860." If it had been the intention of the victimizer that the document should by this means reach the hands of Mr. Barney, he was doomed to disappointment, as that gentleman was absent when the papers were presented. The corner of the envelope was endorsed with the name of George W. Hughes.

Shortly before three o'clock a number of strangers entered the galleries, expecting a repetition of the scene of the previous three days; but as the officer told each office seeker that Mr. Barney would not be again in his office till after Monday next, the crowd soon dispersed.

There were rumors yesterday about the building of the removal of several of the clerks. It was decisively announced that Charles Ehle, a liquidating clerk in the warehouse bureau, had been removed, and Mr. Munson, of the Post, appointed in his place.

Affairs at the Custom House.

Affairs at the Custom House. THE CARGO BY THE PERSIA—THE CONTINUED DULL-NESS AT THE CUSTOM HOUSE—FURTHER DIS-PUTES ABOUT THE TARIPF, ETC., ETC.

The cargoes by the recent packets we have already noticed as being very small; but we have now to record that the shipments by the Persia scarcely exceeded two hundred and fifty tons, when on former occasions they have been from twelve hundred to two thousand tons This alone shows the depressing influence of the new tariff. Merchants will not import anything but what they really need. Our commerce is actually becoming bankrupt by such a state of affairs. Our ships will have to lie idle, or be employed as war vessels, and the steam vessels will have no other cargo than the mails. The large warehouses will have to close for want of business, and thousands of bookkeepers and clerks will be thrown out of employ.

have to close for want of business, and thousands or bookkeepers and clerks will be thrown out of employ. These are facts of too glaring a nature to be overlooked. It is to ta question whether any one particular clerk of a republican stamp can administer the tariff better than another of the democratic mode of thisking, though it is certainly a great matter of doubt whether new men can do as well as persons old in the practical workings of a particular department, especially in passing catries made up of invoices from all parts of the world, in all sorts of languages, with all kinds of currendes, weights and measures, the ready knowledge of which can only be obtained by practical experience.

A very curious result took place resterday on the appraisement of an invoice of cotton goods. In consequence of the date of the bill of lading, the importer was allowed the option of passing the goods under the old or the new tariff. The rate by the old tariff was twenty-four per cent. The merchant chose to enter the goods by the square yard rate of the Morrill tariff expecting to save from ten to fourteen per cent on the duties. Unfortunately, the merchant could not have read the whole of the clause, a portion of which is worded as follows:—

That upon all plain woven cotton goods not included in the foregoing schedules, and upon cotton goods of every description, the value of which is all exceed sistem cents per square yard, sho that, after appraisement, the merchant had to pay a higher instead of a lower duty upon the articles in question. Doubtless the merchant will feel greatly chagrined when he learns the result of his want of care, because, bendes the extra rate of duty—viz one per cent, which he has had to be kept out of his goods during the interval. To dry goods importers the whole of section 14 of the tariff is very important, and requires a careful digesting in all parts. If they have the gizzards of cettiches they may get through the operation, but it is decidedly a tough morsel.

The Joint Committee, appointed by the Legislature to nvestigate the alleged mistake in the count of votes or he recent Senatorial election, have reported the facts as heretofore noted, and appear to arrive at the conclusion that no election has taken place. The pony express, with St. Louis dates, via Kearny 19th, arrived at Sacramento on the 30th.

Business during the week had been greatly interfered with by the inclemency of the weather, and the impassable condition of the roads will prevent much transportation of goods to the interior for several days yet.

The extraordinary fall of rain and the attendant melting of show on the mountains have swollen the principal rivers of the Sacramento and San Joaquin vallies higher than since 1862. Many bridges have been carried away, and thousands of acres of land under cultivation are submerged, the fences carried off, and large quantities of stock drowned. Several lives have been lost, and the damage done by the flood is estimated by hundreds of thousands of dollars. Two expensive bridges across the American river, near Sacramento, are among those destroyed, and great apprehensions of another inundation of Sacramento are experienced. The weather is now clear, and there is not much danger from further loss by the high water.

Furing the interruptions by the flood business naturally has not undergone much change. Coffee is firmer. Fork is in speculative demand, and lard is moving rapidly to the trade. Foreign liquors firm, but domestic brands are drooping. Raw sugars are lower; crushed is unchanged. The receipte of gold dust from the interiocontinued to present a fair average for the season. There is a good demand for money for the steamer of the 1st, at ordinarily fair rates, and full average shipments will go forward. Domestic produce remains quiet. The export shipments of wheat and flour from July 15, 1860, to the 1st of April, 1861, does not vary much from 3,000,000 bushels, and the quantity yet remaining in the state must be very considerable. Grain shippers, however, are deterred in their operations by the weather, and have not been anxious for new engagements, preferring awaiting the arrival of tonag

There is a better supply of vessels now available, though we look for enough business to offer to give them employment at about the list paid rates. There can be but I tile doubt now but what an increased requirement for tonnage will be experienced for the unasportation abread of an average grain crop from the coming harvest.
